Some people have one daddy. I have two. They say they love me through and through. My first daddy makes me laugh all the time. He pulls silly faces and likes to mime. My second daddy likes cooking a lot. That's him in the kitchen, stirring a pot. We have meals at the table every day. They say it's a rule that will always stay. While at the table we have a chat. We talk a lot about this and that. They say communication is the key to a closer bond between them and me. They make sure I eat veggies every day. They say that eating healthy is the way. My daddies and I don't always agree on what they think is best for me. They won't let me watch TV all day ... This rhyming story looks at having same-sex parents.
