Along with its obvious challenges, parenting brings with it tremendous rewards. It is impossible to describe to someone the transformation that one undergoes when they become a parent. After all, what words can be used to fully express that unconditional love you now have for your children? While it may be difficult to do so, this book attempts to describe the feelings, thoughts, and love that every parent has for their child, and how parents will do anything for their children. The illustrations are simple and try to represent how children view the world.
